Mark Hill left his wife at the airport. He wasn't expecting his first business trip to Paris to be anything other than an uneventful six weeks doing a job he had been doing for years. Facing a weekend before beginning work in a suburb of Paris, he ventured into the French countryside in search of his past. What he found instead was a disturbing love for a mysterious French woman who shouldn't, couldn't love him, but did. Racked with guilt from his transgression, he struggled with decisions that he knew he would have to make. Because of the tumultuous affair, Mark realized the lost passion he and his wife had once shared. Though reunited with his wife, his thoughts are constantly drawn back to this strange French woman. Unaware of her father's history, Mark's daughter, Jennifer explores his secretive despair revealed within the journal left behind after his death.
