The Routledge Companion to Latina/o Media gives students and scholars an indispensable overview of the domestic and transnational dynamics at play within Latina/o media. The book adopts a comparative, intersectional, and transnational approach to the theoretical and empirical study of Latina/o media production, policy, representation, and consumption. It defines Latina/o media as that which includes Spanish-language media, English-language and bilingual media aimed at Latinas/os, and mainstream media that contains Latina/o content but that is not necessarily exclusively produced for Latina/o audiences. Contributions consider a range of media formats including film, television, print media, social media, and mobile media and particular attention is paid to incorporating understudied areas like sound studies, audience studies, and production studies.
